Edit question

This final exam is worth 30% of your grade in this course. Please take your time, skip tough questions and come back to them later (perhaps a later question will provide you with a hint or reminder).

There are no “trick” questions. When I give you dates and figures, they are generally correct. The determination of whether an answer is wrong or right will not depend, for example, on the date being 1803 or 1812. However, if the question or answer states federalist or anti-federalist or strict or loose interpretation of the Constitution, that is a VERY BIG difference, and you are responsible to know that.

I'm sure the testing lab will be busy and the Moodle server will under some strain during Finals Week, so be sure to save your work every 20 minutes or so by clicking the NEXT button at the end of the exam.

When you are ready to submit your exam, after having reviewed your answers, you will see your raw score and percentage grade on this test. At the end of finals week, I will review the exam, make any adjustments, and make a final class announcement when final course grades are ready.

issue. Of all of the information presented below, which statement below is the LEAST accurate?

Select one:

- ☐ a. Your textbook authors made statements such as the Declaration of Independence and its ideals being "the most famous statement ever made in American public life". They also claimed that the result of the constitutional debates in the aftermath of the war created "a federal Constitution that was, in its own way, truly revolutionary." Both of these statements give support to the radical interpretation.
- ☐ b. In the video clip, Pauline Maier showed how throughout history, governments based on the "republic" model had failed to last for any length of time. In essence, the founding fathers were attempting to revive this idea, but this time, adding checks and balances and concepts of freedom and popular voting rights to guarantee success... and this success has continued for over 200 years. Again, her's is another supportive case for the radical definition of the revolution.
- ☐ c. Gary Nash, in his audio interview, concludes that indeed, there were small examples of significant changes that occurred after the revolution, many of which we are still "discovering" today, that lead many people to conclude that despite some shortcomings, the result was radical for its time.
- ☒ d. Your textbook authors are in agreement with the British historical video which stated that since no Indians, blacks, or women were included in the Constitution as viable citizens, since the rich and wealthy remained in power, and that since the United States did not end slavery, that the result of the American War for Independence was a conservative, not radical revolution. ✓
- ☐ e. Gordon Wood argued for a loose definition of the term "revolution", and concluded that the changes following the American Revolution were indeed radical in nature.

The correct answer is: Your textbook authors are in agreement with the British historical video which stated that since no Indians, blacks, or women were included in the Constitution as viable citizens, since the rich and wealthy remained in power, and that since the United States did not end slavery, that the result of the American War for Independence was a conservative, not radical revolution..

All of the following, EXCEPT ONE, were claims made by Professor Forrest MacDonald concerning the ratification process of the Constitution of the United States? Which one is not correct?

Select one:

- ☐ a. In the end, Professor MacDonald concludes that the superior organization and insistence on including a Bill of Rights before the Constitution was ratified was the reason that the Anti-Federalists like Thomas Jefferson were so successful in making the document uphold the ideals of human equality that he had written in the Declaration of Independence in 1776.
- ☐ b. Anti-Federalists' fear of a government which would take too much control, creating a fortress in the District of Columbia and using the army to oppress the citizens, was overcome by the mere inclusion of George Washington as President. He had assumed powers when necessary, and had relinquished them when the job was done.
- ☒ c. He stated that many "back room deals" were made by the participants at the ratifying conventions, going so far to say that the vice presidency was offered to John Hancock, but then take away from him after he had already approved of the Constitution. X
- ☐ d. The reasoned arguments of John Jay, James Madison, and Alexander Hamilton, writing under the name Publius in what became known as the Federalist Papers convinced the ratifying conventions of the required number of states to eventually approve the Constitution.
- ☐ e. The founding fathers' concept of immortality was very different than what many people consider immortality and fame today. They wanted to be remembered in a favorable way to the generations, their posterity, that would live many years after they had passed away. By creating and ratifying the Constitution, and leaving it for U.S. citizens today, they accomplished that goal.

The correct answer is: In the end, Professor MacDonald concludes that the superior organization and insistence on including a Bill of Rights before the Constitution was ratified was the reason that the Anti-Federalists like Thomas Jefferson were so successful in making the document uphold the ideals of human equality that he had written in the Declaration of Independence in 1776..

"Madison, a committed nationalist, had performed skillfully. Many doubters at the ratifying conventions had called for amendments that would change the government detailed in the Constitution. By channeling their fears into the area of civil liberties, Madison soothed their mistrust while preserving the government of the Constitution. The Bill of Rights was an important guarantee of individual liberties. In the context in which it was written and ratified, however, it was an even more important guarantee of the power of the national government."

Your instructor agreed with your textbook authors that the Bill of Rights had the effect of increasing, rather than limiting, the powers of the federal government.

King George III received two letters at the start of the American War for Independence.

One was from the Second Continental Congress, and it was a last effort to avoid warfare, often called the Olive Branch Petition. In it, the colonists pledged their loyalty to the crown. The second letter the king received revealed the number of British soldier casualties following the Battle of Bunker Hill. Instead of choosing a path of peace, even if it was still possible, King George believed that the colonies were already in a state of rebellion, and that war was justified.

It is also a paradox, as the textbook noted, that this rural development brought about the market economy and industrial revolution in the United States, which led to the rapid growth of cities in this period.
