NYT: Biden Most ‘Religiously Observant’ President ‘In Half A Century,’ Ushering In A ‘Liberal Christianity’

By Emily Zanotti

Chip Somodevilla/Getty Images

The New York Times praised President Joe Biden’s faith on Saturday, calling Biden the “most religiously observant commander in chief in half a century” and crediting him with ushering in a “different, more liberal Christianity,” by publicly attending Catholic Mass — even though Biden has run afoul of Catholic hierarchy for his recent change of heart on abortion.

In a glowing story published late Saturday, The New York Times lavished on Biden for his religious “conviction,” and commended the new president for abiding piously by his Catholic beliefs, even though the Times has often looked askance at other presidents for having similar piety — including, most notably, President George W. Bush, who is a committed Evangelical Christian.

The difference, of course, The New York Times points out, is that, despite the Catholic Church’s strict line on the issue, Joe Biden publicly supports abortion.

“Mr. Biden, perhaps the most religiously observant commander in chief in half a century, regularly attends Mass and speaks of how his Catholic faith grounds his life and his policies,” the NYT writes, glowingly. “And with Mr. Biden, a different, more liberal Christianity is ascendant: less focused on sexual politics and more on combating poverty, climate change, and racial inequality.”

Those “sexual politics” the NYT says, foster “hate” and “division” — so, thankfully, Biden has abandoned them, despite the fact that opposition to abortion is a core aim of the Catholic Church in the public square, as no less than Pope Francis has repeatedly stressed.

Biden's inauguration speech, the NYT crowed, "was a subtle and explicit effort to show a different vision of a way in which a Christian could imagine themselves as part of a diverse America, one that is defined by these common objects of love, rather than by hate and fear or exclusion."

Beyond the strange idea that Biden is somehow alone in being religious — George W. Bush and former President Jimmy Carter, both of whom served in the last "half-century" wore their Christianity on their sleeves — the story of Biden's commitment to Catholicism comes just days after the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops, one of the highest Catholic authorities in America, warned Catholics that the Biden administration's policy priorities could "advance moral evils."

"Mr. Biden's piety and personal story, his moving witness to how his faith has brought him solace in times of darkness and tragedy, his longstanding commitment to the Gospel's priority for the poor — all of this I find hopeful and inspiring," President of the USCCB, Archbishop Jose Gomez wrote.

But, the archbishop added, "I must point out that our new President has pledged to pursue certain policies that would advance moral evils and threaten human life and dignity, most seriously in the areas of abortion, contraception, marriage, and gender. Of deep concern is the liberty of the Church and the freedom of believers to live according to their consciences."

The New York Times, though, is quite happy with Biden's outlook.

"While conservative Catholics have doubled down on abortion policy and religious freedom for the past four years, Mr. Biden's policy priorities reflect those of Pope Francis, who has sought to turn the church's attention from sexual politics to issues like environmental protection, poverty, and migration," they said.

The New York Times might have checked its own archives for Pope Francis' feelings on the subject of abortion. "Is it legitimate to take out a human life to solve a problem?" Francis asked at a Vatican conference, per the NYT. "Is it permissible to contract a hitman to solve a problem?"

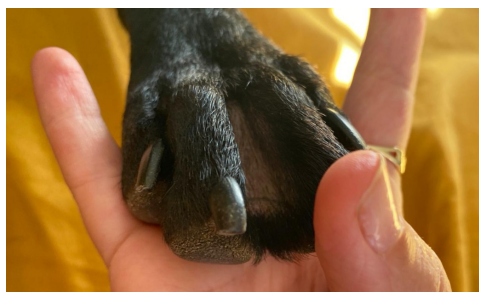

Indeed, in his first address to the World Health Organization, Dr. Anthony Fauci, the Biden administration's emissary to the global health organization, announced that the U.S. would repeal the so-called "Mexico City Policy" again freeing up American taxpayer money for abortions overseas.

That would be like saying liberal conservative. There is no such thing. "Liberal Christianity denies the basic tenets of Christianity therefore can't be called Christianity. They want the credit of being a person of faith without actually having to follow anything.

A devout Catholic, as Biden claims to be, would never accept an endorsement from NARAL or any other pro-abortion group. Much less choose a running mate with a 100% rating from NARAL.

I'm not inclined to give the organization of Catholicism huge kudos for demonstrable Christian behavior. With all the hierarchical scandals, centuries long and deep connections to states and nations, as well as their very doctrines based on "saints" tend to bend in ways I just don't think are correct. So even if Biden is truly a devout Catholic, that really doesn't enthrall me in the slightest. The fact that he is a "rebellious" Catholic just makes what little respect I might offer up even less so. He doesn't seem to do religion for his soul or to help other souls come unto Christ...not by any obvious things he does publicly anyway. It seems like most politicians, he does religion to indicate he has morals and will think morally about stuff. As if he believes there are eternal consequences for his choices and thus we can somehow trust he has the best intentions. This is a classic example of what Jesus Himself called "Whited Sepulchers". All shiny and pretty on the outside, but dead on the inside. Nothing of substance to offer. If Biden ever did think Abortion is wrong, how he changed his mind on that is nothing other than political grand standing and not moral at all.

When I was in school I sang my hymns, went to church, repeated my prayers, acted out the nativity, recited the bible to get a bible, and so I guess by Biden's standards I was a devout Christian, despite me caring very little for what was in the bible and simply following along with my teachers. It is so easy to pretend to be of faith, but from watching my religious friends and family, whether Muslim or Christian, truly regarding the word of their scripture is another thing entirely. One last thing, I haven't been in school to do any of those things for over a decade and even I knew how to pronounce Psalms.

Yay Biden! The most religiously observant president! (By that we mean he is willing to compromise on some of the core tenets of his ostensible faith for partisan politics.)

I have some serious objections with Catholicism, as you would expect from a Protestant, but I would much rather have a real Catholic President than a fake Catholic President (or, rather, a fake Catholic fake President). At least real Catholics don't want to "codify Roe v. Wade" into law.

The New York Times has not actually spoken to a traditional or evangelical Christian in over 50 years, determine the validity of faith by which policies are endorsed, and assumes 'regular Christians' are first degree Istaphobes.

Naturally they praise Biden's Catholicism, because it dares not transgress the policy priorities of the Left.

For goodness sakes being part of a religion is not taking the parts you like and ignoring the other parts. Moreover telling someone that something is not within the bounds of the religion is not exclusionary as they have the ability to change their behavior and comply . Their unwillingness to make themselves fit in is not them being excluded..... there is literally nothing the left will not pervert.

So much for all that "dogma living loudly" garbage. I guess now it's great to be a Christian when the media gets to define what it means to be Christian, instead of hard-won theology forged over centuries.

Christianity was never not about those other things. You just decided to discard all of that good work because a). we weren't telling the federal government to do our Jesusing for us, and b). abortion.

So that's how they are going to do it. Destroy Christianity from inside the church. Last week Nancy and Hillary were bemoaning Evangelicals being the problem for pro choice now the Leftist have adopted the Catholic Church as being the new okay religion as long as they support the Agenda. So people will feel good about themselves and religion as long as it is sanctioned by the NYT and the president. Divide and conquer. Just one more effort to "unite". So there will be a state religion, just like Europe and no one will go to church.

It is laughable for the New York Times, or any main stream media outlet for that matter, to comment on anyone's religious observance or lack thereof. This notion of a "liberal Christianity" is deeply offensive on a number of levels, especially when an outwardly atheistic entity even utters those words. Let's put it this way, if you are Christian you accept the basic premise that God became man, came to this lost and evil world over two thousand years ago, allowed himself to be tortured and murdered at the hands of evil men because He was the only acceptable sacrifice to atone for the sins of all who would believe in Him. Because of your belief, you anticipate God's grace and mercy which will lead you to eternal life with and in Him when you die. God has left us His unfailing Word which is known as the Bible. Men have tried to eliminate and manipulate it for their own evil intentions since its existence. If you have a problem with any of this, don't take it up with me. Take it up with the Creator of the universe.

The NYT scribbler who wrote the piece has no competence in divining Biden's piety or religious convictions. Lumping abortion with "sexual politics" and calling in Pope Francis is rich ... in moral turpitude. It's also moronic; abortion happens as the result of pregnancy, not sex itself.

Biden has stated publicly he's supports a "woman's right to choose." He's also said he "believes in what his Church teaches." Putting those together you get "Biden believes in a woman's right to choose to have her baby murdered in the womb."

As for the quote from Bishop Gomez on Biden's "... longstanding commitment to the Gospel's priority for the poor," the Bishop needs to get a clue. Biden's "longstanding commitment" was for federal welfare programs, which is not the same as directly helping the poor. How obtuse can Bishop Gomez be? Unless Bishop Gomez can prove that these welfare programs actually help the poor and respect the taxpayers who pay for them, he should focus on leading his diocese and keep his political opinions to himself. (I wonder how many Catholics in his diocese actually practice their faith?) (Edited)

I'm not religious, but doesn't helping the needy have to require some form of self-sacrifice to be considered an act of faith? Building your political career off of forcing taxpayers to fund government welfare programs is the opposite of that.

But now his fake piety is so despicable that more and more patriotic Americans will turn away.... whether you are Christian or religious or atheist, fake piety in the President has got to disgust you if you are a patriotic American.

He supports taxpayer funding for abortion worldwide; he sold us out to ccp; he is a proven liar and plagiarist; he is a phoney Christian and fakes his devotion to Catholicism; he took office as a result of a rigged election; he only cares for and loves 6/7 of his grandchildren; he dated and subsequently married another man's wife.... He should absolutely goto mass every week as a baptized Catholic. None of us are perfect. However, it is my understanding that abortion is a moral evil and that you should not receive communion if you have committed a mortal sin. I'm guessing signing an order that uses US funds to kill millions of babies is a mortal sin. It is also a mortal sin to receive communion unworthily so if he receives, he is committing a mortal sin everytime he goes. He should go, maybe he'll learn something, but he should voluntarily forego communion.

Hypocrisy is rampant as a part of the human condition. For some it's as simple as getting caught with fast food scraps in their pockets while at the ice cream shop after fat shaming others for eating the same stuff. For others it is less easy to spot as they claim not to believe in something, but fully adhere to principles of morality that stem from only one source.

I know plenty of faithful scientists and lots of civically involved true Christians and I have definitely crossed paths with cynical, pompous and ultimately hypocritical folks at Church as well as others in politics and the sciences. Still, I've never met a true atheist before. Only people who are agnostic or people who use science and/or politics as their religion.

Typically atheists are just people who got offended by some jerk(s) at Church or they were people who grew up without any religious background and were enticed by professors at college to believe anything they could read on the topics of hating religion. Which one are you?

Exactly what I would expect from the NYT, a complete distortion of Catholic faith and teachings. Biden should be ashamed of himself if he really claims to be as devout as he is. As a Catholic I understand that abortion exists because not everyone is a Catholic or observes one of the many religious faiths that believe Abortion to be wrong. It doesn't mean I have to support it!! And that doesn't justify it. The Declaration of Independence calls out the "right to Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of happiness". Abortion had denied that right to more than 50 million persons in the last 50 years. Yet they claim that if you don't support Abortion you are intolerant. Forgive me if I don't look to Biden or the NYT as a way to understand the tenets of my faith, and what is and is not acceptable. Again, they take us for idiots. Abortion IS their religion. The way to eliminate this evil is to change hearts and minds which is why I support the pro-life movement. Joe Biden unfortunately does the EXACT OPPOSITE and yet continues to call himself a devout Catholic. As I said, he should be ashamed...

The other irritating statement the NYT makes is this so called "sexual politics" thing. Ben Shapiro himself as a orthodox Jew will be expert enough in Torah to point out that one of the biggest things Israel was commanded to do was not to engage in sexual activity with their neighbors knowing full well they would and cause them to worship other gods. One of those gods was molech. His worshipers sacrifice their own children.
